NOTIFICATION

All the students are hereby informed that, presentation skill is one of the important attributes of a PhD student as this helps to develop critical thinking, keeps you abreast with the recent developments in your research area, provides a platform to disseminate your research outputs among peers and improves body language & organization skills. Therefore, the Institution has decided to initiate the culture of encouraging the students to present their research work in various seminars and conferences. Henceforth, the students should participate in at least one seminar/conference/short course each semester. This will be awarded certain credits during the RPEC evaluation process and considered as a parameter for graduation.
